Nothing printed about him interested him. All that is changed. With the keenest interest he now awaits each new attack, reading every condemning word at the cartiest opportunity his clipping service affords him. The latest Tarbell article, made public Wednesday, was no exception. Every word from the author's imputation that his wealth had besmirohed charity and education, wherever it had touched them, to the unsparing autopsy

Hungry for Kind Words.

Hungry for Kind Words.

So when David E. Howatt, the long-trusted superintendent of the oil king's grounds, says "sympathy—that's what Mr. Rockefeller wants; it's what he yearns for day after day," he knows what he is talking about.

Rockefeller in his might, it is said, has grasped at such few kind words as have been spoken for him as eagerly and thapkfully as a child in her poverty might clutch a penny to buy sweets. Though he questions with unvarying care the many appeals for aid that come train dissecting motives and purposes with minute scrutiny, suspicious always, the few words said in his defense have been accepted by him at their face value and more, gratefully and triumphantily, with nover a suspicion of their disinterestedness.

After reading the last sentence, he exciaimed:
"Thank the Lord, it's her last."
All of which comes from a source as authentic as anything could be, barring a declaration from the toriured Croesus himself. Though he has little to say to them, the attaches at Forest Hill, who have been there longest, have learned to read Rockefeller like a Sunday school lesson.

200 Acres of Land, about half of which is cleared and in a high state of cultivation, the balance in wood. The improvements consist of a modern dwelling, covered with state, with large, airy rooms, surrounded by a beautiful, well shaded lawn, and all nocessary outbuildings. The land lies beautifully and is admirably adapted to subdivision into villa sites, having a frontage of a mile on the railroad and about one-half a mile on the main country road.

The demand for this class of property is rapidly increasing, and the fact that it is the most eligible point on the railroad for the establishment of a suburban town, and its proximity to Richmond, makes it certain that this place in the near futre will largely increase in value over the prices at which it can now be bought. The property can be inspected at any time, and persons wishing to attend the sale can leave elba Station at 4 P. Me and return at 7 o'clock.
